HealthSouth Corporation (OTC Pink Sheets: HLSH) announced today that Patrick A. Foster, President of its Inpatient Division, and Larry D. Taylor, President of its Surgery Division, have resigned to pursue other opportunities. HealthSouth will begin an immediate search for replacements.

"I appreciate the significant contributions both Pat and Larry have made during their careers at HealthSouth, especially during the past sixteen months as they successfully managed their respective divisions through a very challenging period," said Jay Grinney, HealthSouth President and Chief Executive Officer. "I wish both of them well in their future endeavors."

Mike Snow, HealthSouth's newly-appointed Chief Operating Officer, will be working with the divisions to ensure a smooth transition. "Both the Inpatient and Surgery divisions have been performing well and are a vital part of the Company's operations going forward," said Snow. "I've been impressed with the talent level of our management team across the country and am confident we will quickly identify people to fill these roles."

In addition to the new search for Foster and Taylor's replacements, the Company has stated plans to announce the appointment of a new Chief Financial Officer by the end of the third quarter and is nearing the end of a transition plan for the Board of Directors. Once this process is complete, HealthSouth will have an entirely new executive team in place. HealthSouth previously announced the appointment of new leadership in the roles of Diagnostic Division President; Chief Compliance Officer; General Counsel; Outpatient Rehabilitation Division President; President and Chief Executive Officer; and Chief Operating Officer.

"We are moving forward with a new executive management team who has the experience, talent and dedication to make HealthSouth one of the country's preeminent healthcare providers," concluded Grinney.
